President Warns People to Guard Speech on War

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—President Wilson today addressed a communication to the American people, asking them to observe strict neutrality in speech and conduct in the present European conflict and to act in a spirit of impartiality and fairness and friendliness to all concerned.

My Fellow Countrymen—I suppose that every thoughtful man in America has asked himself during these last troubled weeks what influence the European war may exert upon the United States, and I take the liberty of addressing a few words to you in order to point out that it is entirely within our own choice what its effect upon us will be and to urge very earnestly upon you the part of peace and good will which will best safeguard the nation against strife and disaster.

The effect of the war on the United States will depend upon what American citizens say and do. Every man who reads in America will not and speak in the free spirit of neutrality, which is the spirit of impartiality and fairness and friendliness to all concerned. If we do not, then in this critical moment will be determined largely by what we do and say, upon what newspapers and magazines contain, on what ministers utter in their pulpits, and men proclaim their opinions on the street.

The people of the United States are aware from many nations and efforts from the nations at large that in natural and inevitable that there should be various varieties of sympathy and dislike among those with regard to the cause and circumstances of the conflict. Some will wish one nation, others another, to succeed in the momentous struggle.

It will be easy to excite passion and difficult to ally it with reason. It will be easy to utter a word of blame or praise, but it will be difficult to utter a word of blame or praise which will not be taken as a personal attack upon some one or some thing, and thus lead to the kind of ill-will and ill-feeling which is the worst enemy we have in this world.

It is the duty of every citizen to guard his speech and conduct in the present European conflict and to act in a spirit of impartiality and fairness and friendliness to all concerned.

It is not a partisan, but as a friend.

I venture, therefore, my fellow countrymen, to speak a solemn word of warning to you against the deepest, most subtle, most insidious branch of neutrality which may spring out of partiality, out of passionately taking sides. The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name, during these days that are so trying to our people. We must be impartial in thought as well as in action, must not put a curb on our sympathies as well as upon our criticisms, and must be careful not to let our words be construed as a declaration of one party to the struggle before another.

My thought is of America, I am speaking, I feel sure, the earnest wish and purpose of every thoughtful American that this great country of ours, which is, of course, the first in our thoughts and in our hearts, should show herself in this time of perilous trial a more heroic nation than she has ever been, a nation that neither sits in judgment upon others nor is disturbed in her own councils and which keeps herself at all times to do what is honest and disinterested and truly serviceable for the peace of the world.

Should we not realize that we are ourselves the recipients of the same kindness and good will which we are so ready to bestow upon others?

To Fight at Strassburg

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The first great battle between the French army invading Germany and the German forces is expected to take place at Strassburg, capital of Alsace-Lorraine.

Announcement was made by the War Office today that the French advance is proceeding successfully and that the Germans are being pushed back toward the Rhine.

According to the war office the entire French line, extending in irregular formation along the rugged boundary of Alsace-Lorraine about 150 miles in length, is advancing slowly, driving back the advance line of the Germans from their positions along the French frontier.

The French army has taken many prisoners and captured a large amount of munitions of war. As the French advance they are throwing up fortifications of earth and wire entrenchments which they can fall back upon if necessary.

THINK CITY IMPREGNABLE.

The German strategy of the French invasion at Strassburg is not dissimulated by the general German press. The view is that the city is impregnable and that the French are only attacking it from the rear.

GERMAN CAVALRY NOW ON BOTH SIDES OF THE GREAT BELGIAN PORT

ANTWERP, via London, Aug. 18.—German cavalry were seen north of Antwerp today. The military governor has ordered the civil guard placed on a war footing and it will be used to assist the garrison in defending the city.

A dispatch from the AMERICAN correspondent at Brussels last week said that German cavalry had nearly reached Antwerp from the south. The foregoing indicates that the Germans have surrounded the Belgian port from the land side.

Tumult Denies Protest by Kaiser

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The German Emperor has today sent a communication to the British government denying the report that he had ordered the evacuation of the entire country as soon as possible after Brussels had surrendered.

Giant Aquitania Now Scout Cruiser

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The great battleship, the Aquitania, which was built for the British navy, has been converted into a scout cruiser for the German navy. The ship is now being fitted out for service in the German fleet.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen and London, Aug. 18.—Germany has declined the surrender of Belgium. The Belgian government has refused to grant the demand. The message sent from Berlin to the Belgian government paid high tribute to the valor of the Belgians and offered to make any arrangements compatible with the conflict between Germany and France, including the evacuation of the entire country as soon as possible after Brussels had surrendered.

THUNDER GEORGIANS ARE ENGAGED IN BATTLE

HEAVY ARTILLERY IS HEARD TODAY

Menaced BRUSSELS

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Certain of the London newspapers today print dispatches indicating that a great battle is being fought on the field of Waterloo, between the Germans and the allies.

The issue of the battle—which follows the removal of the Belgian capital from Brussels to Antwerp—is reported in doubt.

The Daily Express says: There is little doubt that a great battle is now occurring in Belgium between the Germans and the French allies.

Our correspondent, in a dispatch from Antwerp, indicates that the Germans are advancing on the western half of the city of Waterloo and that some of the greatest impediments are in their way.

A Daily Mail dispatch dated Monday, 8.30 p.m. from Brussels, says: A little has been heard since this morning. The Germans are said to be fighting Belgian and French troops. No news of the battle is to hand.

PEARL HARBOR ON BRUSSELS. Telegrams from Brussels to the Exchange Telegraph Company's correspondents say: Today has been full of excitement. Much discussion has been circulating owing to the removal of the seat of government to Antwerp and the departure of the royal family.

It is expressed that the German effort to force the extreme left and center of the Belgian line between Gembloux and Wavre, and Antwerp and Tournai is to effect a rapid advance toward the French army by way of Liège and Namur.

Understandably the Germans are pressing forward on all parts of their line in Belgium. It seems certain the supreme struggle is at hand, if not actually being fought, at the reports indicate.

Today the sound of heavy guns could be heard in Brussels, but reports of the fighting were given out.

The Belgian Ministry of War, Flank and Foreign Affairs and the French and British Consulates in Belgium have left Brussels for Antwerp, according to a dispatch received here by the Exchange Telegraph.

The office of the British and French legations in Brussels were left by their respective ministers in the hands of the Spanish legation.

A Hava dispatch from Brussels says: It is expected that the legation will follow the government to Antwerp, but the French Ministry will remain in Brussels.

Sheep to the Slaughter!

According to a European dispatch, great flocks of sheep, driven by dogs, furnish the boulevardiers with an unwanted spectacle as they pass through the streets on the way to feed the army at the front.

And through the same streets marches another column, to feed, like the sheep, the yawning maw of war.

coast cities in fear of an attack by the Germans. The machinery of the government has been transferred to Antwerp.

Queen Elizabeth and her two children have already gone to Antwerp and if the German advance against that city becomes to menacing she will probably take refuge in England.

The right wing of the German Army seems to be engaged in a great enveloping movement to cut off the Belgium Army from the main body of its French allies.

CAVALRY OPENING WAY. Fighting is reported at Gembloux and other points where the German cavalry has been thrown forward to engage the advance guard of the allies and to open the way for the advance of infantry and artillery.

Gemboux lies twenty-five miles southeast of Brussels; eleven miles northwest of Namur and eighteen miles from the historic field of Waterloo.

According to an announcement from Belgian source a German force is said to have been caught between the French cavalry and a Belgian column which was engaged in a northward movement from Namur.

The German losses were said to be heavy, due to the stubborn fighting qualities of the Uhlans who charged repeatedly against superior forces.

MARCHING ON BRUSSELS. A heavy force from the German right wing is reported to be marching directly upon Brussels in a straight line from Namur.

There are strong indications that the German forces near Brussels are regarded as a strategic movement to direct their attack upon the Belgian forces around Louvain, where a heavy force of German cavalry is heading to the north and west to get between the infantry of the Belgians and their French allies northwest of Namur.

The German advance has been reported from the vicinity of Brussels, where on Sunday the Belgian railway forces for four hours against the Eighteenth Corps.

by a circle of fourteen of the strongest forts in the German empire, having most recently all of the approaches to the city can be flooded.

Strasbourg lies two miles west of the Rhine upon the River Ill. And a heavy German force of infantry and cavalry supported by reserve artillery is massed there.

A flying squadron of French cavalry has approached within ten miles of Strassburg according to the claims of the French military authorities.

It is believed that the French are preparing to attack the German lines of the Rhine, which are held by the French advance detachment.

The main advance of the French is being made as rapidly as possible to support the French lines and to bombard German forts. The destruction of a great part of western Alsace and the German frontier is expected to result from this advance.

The story of a former sergeant in the German army, who deserted after the first assault upon the Rhine, is published by General Von Emmen today. The officer who is in Alsace and the mobilization was carried on in a haphazard manner.

Story of Napoleon's Defeat at Waterloo

London—This today indicates that a great battle is being fought between the Allies and the Germans on the historic field of Waterloo. Here is the story of the famous battle of Waterloo, won by the allied forces over Napoleon, June 18, 1815, as taken from Everybody's Encyclopedia:

The preliminary battles had been at Ligny, June 16, when Napoleon had defeated the Prussians under Blucher, and at Quatre Bras, on the same day, when the allies under Wellington compelled the French Marshal Ney to retire. At Waterloo the French numbered about 72,000. The allies (British, Dutch and German) under Wellington had about 67,000; the Prussians, about 30,000 more, under Blucher, came up in time to take part in the close of the battle and in the pursuit. The battle began at 11:30 a. m.

Briefly it may be said to have consisted of a series of brilliant but unsuccessful charges by the French, and Regent resistance on the part of the British. In the evening the French "Old Guard" charged, but unavailingly; after which the allies advanced. The French lost about 35,000, and many prisoners; the allies about 22,000. Marshal Grouchy, though he defeated Blucher at Wavre, June 18, failed to prevent him from joining Wellington, and himself failed to come to Napoleon's aid, though but a few miles distant. The rout of the French was complete, and the disaster led to Napoleon, the result being his deposition and exile to St. Helena.

Briefly it may be said to have consisted of a series of brilliant but unsuccessful charges by the French, and Regent resistance on the part of the British. In the evening the French "Old Guard" charged, but unavailingly; after which the allies advanced. The French lost about 35,000, and many prisoners; the allies about 22,000. Marshal Grouchy, though he defeated Blucher at Wavre, June 18, failed to prevent him from joining Wellington, and himself failed to come to Napoleon's aid, though but a few miles distant. The rout of the French was complete, and the disaster led to Napoleon, the result being his deposition and exile to St. Helena.

The preliminary battles had been at Ligny, June 16, when Napoleon had defeated the Prussians under Blucher, and at Quatre Bras, on the same day, when the allies under Wellington compelled the French Marshal Ney to retire. At Waterloo the French numbered about 72,000. The allies (British, Dutch and German) under Wellington had about 67,000; the Prussians, about 30,000 more, under Blucher, came up in time to take part in the close of the battle and in the pursuit. The battle began at 11:30 a. m.

Declares Germans Destroyed Town

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The correspondent of the Times at Berlin, Switzerland, says: The Germans have burned the town of Brussels and blown up all its factories, the reason alleged being that the inhabitants resist a German patrol. All the people of the town were required to register.

Northamptonshire, says: Germany is provided with plenty of coal. It is known here that women are being employed in the collieries in the province of Rhine and Westphalia.

SUGAR BOSTON SUGAR

Sugar jumped to nine cents a pound, retail, in Boston today.

A report that "sugar" is cheaper at Minneapolis, four would be down twenty-five cents a barrel in Boston today, was more hopeful than correct, so far as inquiry revealed.

The price of sugar in the face of the strike and Federal investigation now in progress, struck housewives as particularly expediting. Sugar has gone up at an even rate a pound since last Saturday, even while United States District Attorney French and Attorney-General Boynton, for Massachusetts, were investigating, jointly and separately.

The Housewife protested vigorously to Attorney-General Boynton today of the jump in sugar, saying:

"Mr. Boynton, sugar is now 9 cents a pound in many of the stores, though not in all, some places you can buy it for eight. If it is eight at some stores, why is it nine at others? There is no excuse for this. It is exorbitant."

TAPPOCA JUMPS.

Tapococa went up another cent per pound, retail today.

United States District Attorney French and Attorney-General Boynton conferred today at Mr. French's office in 315 State street. They agreed to work mutually. Whatever evidence is available to the Federal Government, Mr. French will turn it over to the United States Attorney, if any prosecution results, it probably will be prosecuted by the Federal Government.

The American learned today that the highest authority in Great Britain has offered the sugar harvest of the United States a reward of a cent a pound more than they can secure in any other country, and will take as much as can be forwarded.

The wholehearted disclosure this secret said Great Britain had been made on the part of the United States sugar supply, but was now forced to turn to the United States producers.

This may account for the reported shortage in raw sugar which has been reported in the United States, and the fact that the United States has been unable to secure the same quantity of sugar as it has been able to in the past.

PROBE COAL STORAGE.

Federal, State and county agents are now on the alert to detect any conspiracy on the part of the sugar trust to hoard coal, and to make sure that the coal is not being used for the purpose of making a profit.

PELLETIER TO ACT.

United States District Attorney Pelletier announced that he will call a special jury this week if the evidence regarding the manipulation of food prices warrants his doing so.

Although all foodstuffs are under inquiry, the sugar and sugar magnates are the most prominent. The reason for this is that the sugar trust is the most powerful of all trusts, and the one that has the most influence in the country.

Information has reached the office of the United States District Attorney that the price for the Boston market in sugar is four cents a pound, while in New York, indicating an interstate commerce violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Attorney-General Boynton said today: "We shall have information from our sources. Just as soon as we have reliable evidence of illegal methods of combination are discovered, there will be grand jury action. I intend to confer with United States District Attorney French. Already our inquiries have revealed combinations and trusts which extend out to New York, Chicago and other points. It may be that data which the State Attorney has secured will be of importance to the Federal authorities."

SHAMROCK IN DOODGE WARSHIPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Shamrock IV, was viewed by hundreds of people as she lay at anchor in New York harbor today. The officers and crew of the yacht were greeted warmly today.

FORCED TO DODGE WARSHIPS.
It was not an enthusiastic reception as they would have received had the cup races still been on the program for this Fall, but all were glad to see Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht safe in port because they had experienced a rather novel and somewhat hazardous trip across the Atlantic. Calms and storms had been encountered, sometimes the yacht was buffeted by a strong wind, at other times she drifted and had to be towed and twice she was holed in order to ride out heavy storms.

There is attention to this side dodged warships, German and English, and finally put in to Bermuda as the safest port. Those on board heard the declaration of war by wireless from passing vessels and occasionally from the warships.

The Shamrock does not look like a speedy motor craft. She is not dainty and pretty like the Shamrock II or III, and she does not look as if she has been built with a view to speed. She is a sturdy, heavy, high-backed, high-sided, and heavy, like a battleship, and full of wind, at other times she was holed in order to ride out heavy storms.

The after-cabin is a large and low, and the main cabin is just as large as it is wide. The main cabin is a large and low, and the main cabin is just as large as it is wide. The main cabin is a large and low, and the main cabin is just as large as it is wide.

WELL IN THE HANDS

What attracted most attention, however, were the peculiar channels on each side of the yacht, which were attached to the main cabin. These channels are a little water, and the yacht is so built that the water is not so much as it is in the main cabin. The water is not so much as it is in the main cabin. The water is not so much as it is in the main cabin.

As soon as the two yachts were started into the race, the Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead.

Then the crew got busy. Bitterness taken out of the lead of the Shamrock IV was transferred to the Shamrock IV. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead.

Two yachts on board. On board the Shamrock IV, the crew was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead. The Shamrock IV was in the lead.

THE cinematographer on his home is bound to practice his art. He knows well that the enjoyment with a gun over thought to the camera is the greatest pleasure of animals, in all parts of the earth, when moving pictures, no fastidious person stays at home can enjoy the sensations the boldest and bravest travellers and explorers, he must sometimes, however, to get ideas of "game" without causing it the slightest harm, or even capturing.

If he wants to photograph birds in the most exact to the perfection that the crafty Elves used at the end of the 19th century, he must be able to produce himself into the midst of the unsuspecting animal in a wonderful situation of some familiar animal to which presence they are accustomed.

Thus, in the picture on this page, we see how Mr. Frank Neumann, the English moving picture cinematographer, uses the interior of a very thoughtfully moving picture to place for himself and his camera.

He is surrounded by a whole atmosphere through which he can survey the movements of the animals. The operator has only to exercise a little patience and skill in order to obtain film showing every incident of the picture, which he calls the "family life" of the wildest and most dangerous.

Not Different Twice.

It was a village blacksmith, and a true one, who was standing before the church door in the morning. "Joe's hair better's plowing," Joe's maid to his new assistant. "You shorn Joe, hairless other ways!" And the bangs of the maid Joe gave him a British air.

"You're not holding that very handsome hair light," went the blacksmith, after casting a critical eye over the maid's hair. "You shorn Joe, hairless other ways!" And the bangs of the maid Joe gave him a British air.

Joe held it a little longer, and, leaving his race, landed a turkey blow on the back of the maid's head.

"You clumsy brute!" yelled that worthy, as he held his scullum between his eyes. "You shorn Joe, hairless other ways!" And the bangs of the maid Joe gave him a British air.

With open arms, the maid took his handkerchief, then said slowly, "You shorn Joe, hairless other ways!" And the bangs of the maid Joe gave him a British air.

For the first time I've "it" yet!"

hardest part of the dirt, dissolving it. On washday, and boiling of the hair, heads often enough. There has been a mistaken idea for years that frequent washing is bad for the hair. The result is that nearly everybody has more or less hair trouble. Practically everybody has dandruff, and hundreds have hair that is too oily or dry, or hair that is faded or lifeless.

The result of all these troubles is falling hair, and after that comes baldness.

If you will wash your head at least once a week with Birt's Head Wash, your hair will take on new vigor, simply because your scalp will be put in a clean, natural condition, so that your hair can have a chance to grow as it should.

Birt's Head Wash is made of Refined Creamy Soap, Cochiti Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. Any doctor will tell you this is a good formula.

Free Trade Is Not As Sweet As It Sounds

Look at the Price of Sugar, for Instance. It Pays TO ENCOURAGE YOUR OWN COUNTRY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

Occasionally we have pointed out that the free trade idea can be overdone—and had been overdone.

Talk about cheap Argentine beef, and taking off the duty, sounds well.

When the talking ends, you find that you have discouraged the American farmer—and beef is dearer.

It is all very well to talk about free sugar and the poor man's coffee cup, and to take the tariff off the sugar—as this country has done.

But when the talking ends, you find that the American growers of sugar are discouraged, disheartened, with good cause. Southern cane sugar plantations are abandoned.

Northern beet-sugar enterprises are given up in despair.

And now the poor man, with his coffee cup and his tea cup finds that sugar has gone up from two to four cents a pound, and is going higher—because taking off that duty discouraged American sugar growers and made the country dependent on the foreign sugar grower.

This need not be very serious yet. We learn something by the shutting off of the supplies of beet sugar from Germany, and we can perhaps learn some other things.

We ought to know, without the lesson of war or hardship, through increased prices, THAT IT PAYS TO ENCOURAGE YOUR OWN FAMILY, keep work in the nation, to arrange for protection from high prices. TO MAKE YOUR LAWS FOR ALL YOUR OWN CITIZENS, whether they be farmers who raise cattle, plantation owners who produce sugar, mechanics who turn out skilled work.

After Victory==

What Will the Winners Ask? What Will They Get?

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

Sooner or later this war must end—let us hope it will be soon. So many thousands of millions of dollars can be spent. So many millions of men can be killed.

When the thousands of millions are spent, and the millions are dead—one side or the other must WIN.

What will happen when the dust settles, the blood dries up, and the smoke of powder floats away?

We shall do no guessing as to names of victors.

But one side MUST win, and one side must lose. Human nature is too brutal, too near the animal, to permit hope of a settlement based on anything but blood and money exhaustion.

If the German side wins—as millions of good German-American citizens hope and believe—what will Germany and Austria want, what will they get?

More money, of course, to start with, more territory.

Probably some arrangement that would permanently weaken the adversary by prohibiting future armaments—what else?

If the French, English and Russian combination wins, what will that combination demand?

France, of course, would call for the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine, taken by Bismarck. And France would demand also the five thousand million francs that Bismarck took—with interest for forty years.

What will England want, what will Russia want?

Russia will want Constantinople—probably—and will not get it. England, whose diplomats are able, will want a great deal, and ask for it very politely, in the name of liberty and humanity. She probably will not get all that she wants. But if she gets half of what she asks, she will do moderately well.

Long and tiresome will be the treaty negotiations, when the hands of Europe wipe off the blood and take up the pen, when the bull-necked fighter makes way for the man with the thick neck and wide forehead who will do the thinking and the bargaining.

We shall see a changed Europe beyond question when this fighting ends.

What the nations will ask or get, we in this country can only guess.

But this we KNOW:

Every nation without asking it will get a blood-letting that will weaken it for years to come.

Every nation will lose in young men more than any amount of money can repay.

Every nation that gets new territory inhabited by hostile inhabitants WILL BITTERLY REGRET THE ACQUISITION, for men do not permanently remain slaves politically or bodily.

Every nation engaged in this fight will need new blood, new factories even more than money or land.

Every nation will wish that it had never been cursed with the vast army that made war not only easy but inevitable.

What this nation hopes for the others is DISARMAMENT, REFERENCE OF ALL MATTERS, INCLUDING THAT MYSTERIOUS AND MYSTIC THING, "NATIONAL HONOR," TO THE SOBER JUDGMENT OF IMPARTIAL MEN.

The Press Agents Agree with Sherman

By T. E. Powers

It's tough on the press agents, this war is. They can't get a thing on the front page, and it doesn't console them a bit that Ulster, Doc Cook and the Currency Question are in the same fix.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Have We Lost Our Punch?

A British critic in war point of the cloud, and not a moving picture machine and an explosion but to meet her. The old town didn't what it used to be.

Obscure, but using Strong. Despite the cables and the wireless the old-fashioned gentlemanly spirit is still there of war.

Getting There. Every dog has his day. The next day of three hundred of them being exclusively in the dogs of war.

We Can Do It If Necessary. It begins to look as if we should have to furnish all the intelligence for the future of the world.

A Prompt Collector. When nations fall out the grave-diggers are more than busy.

A Letter from Santa Claus

Europe—where nearly all the Christmas toys come from—because of the war is idle, and will send no toys to America for Christmas.

DEAR Children of America: In many a happier year I've journeyed far across the sea to bring you Christmas cheer. But now, although I know not why, the folks that fashioned toys to bring delight at Christmas time to little girls and boys have snatched blank, wicked rifles up and left the happy town. To hurry to the battlefield and shoot their brothers down.

THE toy shops where they worked and sang no longer thro and hum: The streets about reach to the dreadful martial drum. And all the laden soldiers that were only meant for play are melted into leaden shafts whose mission is to slay. And they who made the soldier toys shall toil for you no more—They're left the day of make-believe, and gone to real stern war.

I'm growing old, dear little ones; and yet, deep in my heart, I still hope men will soon forget war's desolating art. I still believe that some glad day the magic of your wiles Will make them walk the ways of peace to win your Christmas smiles. And when your fair souls triumph o'er the warring hearts of men I'll whip my happy reindeer up and come to you again.

That Marital Promise to Obey

By Dorothy Dix

A YOUNG woman who is going to be married asks me to define the meaning of the word "obey" as it is used in the marriage ceremony.

She says that she is willing to swear to be loyal, faithful and helpful to her husband, but that she expects him to defer to her wishes and judgment as she expects to defer to his, and that she has no intention of blindly obeying him, or she hesitates to make a vow that she cannot keep. There fore she wants to know whether the word "obey" is to be taken literally, or merely figuratively, in the marriage service.

The word "obey" has no meaning whatever in the marriage service. It is nothing but a lie, which should be eliminated for a forceful and honest consent to the most solemn contract of a life, and at the moment that she should most insist on her free will, she is making.

When the modern girl swears at the altar to "obey" the man she is marrying she has no notion whatever of doing so. Her heart may be running over with love for her husband; she may be giving him a boundless devotion, and pledging him every service of brain and hand, but the one thing that she has no expectation whatever of doing is to obey him.

And the man knows this. What ever else he expects of his wife, he doesn't expect obedience. He doesn't even attempt to know how the right to be a master to her, she is neither a child nor a slave to be ordered about and subject to his commands.

Why should an intelligent woman, old enough to get married, be made to promise to obey? If she has her sense enough and sufficient judgment to know how to conduct her own affairs, and what to do under the stress of life, for place is not at a man's side in a household, but in some institute for the feeble-minded.

If marriage is the right sort of a marriage it is a partnership of a man and woman, who must their fortunes and their lives and establish a home. Each partner has everything that the other has, in the world (provided in this century and both should have the same authority.

confer together; they discuss ways and means together, each yields certain points to the other, and in this way they work out a harmonious plan of action.

And this plan prevails in every household that is a success. The wife respects her husband's judgment and follows his advice along certain lines. The husband readily admits that his wife's opinions on certain other lines is of more value and weight than his, but neither blindly obeys the other. There is a theory that in the old days when women were more subject to men than they are at present, the word "obey" in the marriage service literally meant what it says, and when a woman took that vow upon herself she intended to keep it. I doubt this being true. It has ever been the privilege of the slave to deceive the master, and our most looking grandmothers probably had their tongues in their cheeks, just as much as we have when they were promised to obey the husband they meant to hoodwink while they did as they pleased.

But any rate, the independent, intelligent girl of today is not going to give blind obedience to any man just because he is her husband.

Almost Inadequate.

The Nobel prize of $40,000 will go to the man who ends the war. Inasmuch as he will save the world about fifteen billion dollars, it hardly seems that he will get all that there is coming to him.

A Close Race. War never moves so fast that he leaves hunger for behind.

An Irrelevant Dream. And poor old Joe Hoover thought he was going to get a vacation from war.

He Came Too Soon. It becomes more and more apparent that Napoleon died before his time.

Attractions of the Future. Many European countries are about to add to their collections of famous ruins.

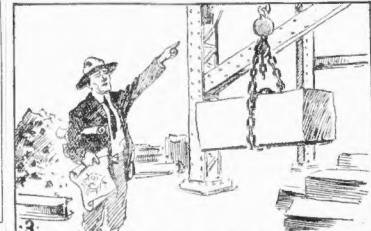

The Six Ages of the Conscript

1. THE BABY. The pride of his parents—the hope of the nation.

2. THE SCHOOLBOY. Developing his mind, so that he may be of benefit to society.

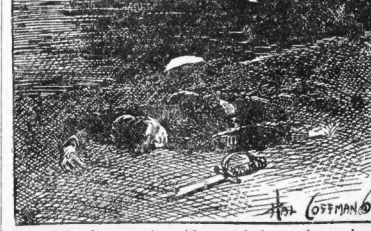

3. THE WORKER. Adding to the wealth of the nation.

4. THE HOME BUILDER. The foundation of society, of the nation, of civilization itself.

5. THE RECRUIT. Mobilized. Taken from his work, from his home, to fight against fellowmen, taken from their homes and their work.

6. MISSING. Lost to the widow and the orphan. Lost to the nation. Lost to civilization. "But 'twas a famous victory."
